POETRY.

SONG OF THE MISER.

BY WILLIAM M. FINCH.

Clink, Clink!
There's a ray of light through the window chink,
That comes to play with my gold, I think:
I must bar it out to-morrow.
I'll have no sun-rays counting my store:
They come from a world thats hungry for more,
That spieth my coffers and hateth me sore;
That I know to my sorrow.

Clink, Clink!
How the golden eagles glow on the brink
Of the yellow pyramid, built, I think,
From spoils of every people.
Say I frame me a miniature church the while,
Moidore and Sovereign will pave me the aisle,
Doubloons and Ducats will wall it in style.
And Crowns run up to a steeple.

Clink, Clink!
Across the way but a chain and a link,
A spider hides in his web, I think;
A leopard-sleek attorney.
He would cut men's throats serenely and cold,
If their artery-blood ran molten gold:
He's travelling on to his master's fold—
I wish him a sulphurous journey.

Clink, Clink!
A beggar-girl stood on the parapet brink
Of the lonely bridge—quite crazy, I think;
And gazed on the moaning water.
She asked for a farthing; I gave her a curse;
She plunged, and the city provided a hearse;
No matter—it might have been terribly worse;
'Twas only a poor man's daughter.

Clink, Clink!
A delicate eyelid flashed me a wink,
Yesterday—close by the park, I think:
What widow was it, I wonder?
Why smile upon me, grim, ugly and old?
If the forks of the lightening were woven with gold,
They would lasso each flash with a veil's white fold
Despite the following thunder!

Clink, Clink?
My beautiful gold, thy gleams I drink,
Brighter, more nectrous than wine, I think:
They glint like stars of even.
I love thee better than sun-brown hair,
Better than sick men June's warm air,
Better than angels the penitent's prayer,
Better, aye, better than Heaven!

MISCELLANEOUS.

ROMANTIC BREACH OF PROMISE.

—:8:—

In fifteen hundred and thirty-eight, when France happened to be at peace, and nothing was talked of at court, say the memoir writers, but festivals, tournaments, carnivals, masquerades, and so forth, one incident occurred to supply the town folks with talk. This was no other than the action for breach of promise of marriage, brought by the Marquis Jehan-Loys, of Saluces, against Madame Philippes de Montespedon, widow of Marshal Monte-Jan, who had been governing Piedmont. Some of the details of this case are singular enough to deserve a narrative on their own account; others are amusing chiefly because of their odd similarity with sentimental passages in the lives of our own country folks, from time to time revealed to us in courts of law.

Marshal Monte-Jan died in Piedmont, leaving no children. His wife was instantly besieged with offers of marriage by various great lords of that state—a circumstance at which we are requested by the chroniclers "not to marvel." For Madame Philippes was a very respectable and virtuous lady, adorned with great beauty, and in the flower of her youth; she possessed, moreover, in addition to all these perfections, sixty thousand livres of revenue in her own right, besides considerable expectations. First among the suitors, who followed so closely on the funeral, was this above mentioned marquis of Saluces, who seems to have been a foolish fellow, and who was certainly most scandalously treated. The narrator was on the lady's side, but he naively states very damaging facts. Madame Philippes feigned to accept the marquis' service, because it would be convenient to make use of his escort on the way back to France, whither he was going by express order of the king. Despite of her riches, the fair widow seems to have been accidentally without ready cash.—She allowed her suitor to pay her expenses all the way from Turin to Paris; and these expenses were by no means light. All the household of her late husband, besides her own, accompanied her. The marquis thought he had the game in his own hands, and assumed the tone of a master by anticipation—intimated that the gentlemen, servants and officers of the deceased should be dismissed, item half those of the lady herself, especially the women—for she had besides dames and demoiselles, femmes de chambre, and others for different kinds of work, as many as fifteen and sixteen. But Madame Philippes was so prudent that she never, it is alleged, allowed a word to escape that would bind her; and yet so clear that she obtained all the assistance she wanted.

The marquis, as soon as they got upon French ground, had ordered (Italian that he was) all his people to be on the watch to prevent any communication being brought from a rival; for he did not doubt that such a rare pearl would be eagerly sought after. Yet, in spite of all precautions, as soon as the party arrived at Lyons, a courier came from M. de Vieilleville, a relative of the lady, and delivered his letters so secretly that no one ever suspected their existence. These letters contained the information that the court had heard of the proposed marriage with the marquis of Saluces, and believed the couple were coming to Paris for the wedding. The news had much pleased the king, because he had always heard that love bound a man to a country more than anything, and thought that the marquis, having become a Frenchman by this alliance, would be more faithful ever afterwards. This was a sentimentality not to have been expected from Francis the First. However, said the correspondent, "I think you are going to marry more for the good of your country than your own good—if what I hear be true: but I cannot yet believe it; for it is not likely that you would, after having been so happy in your first marriage, enter into another so hurriedly without even warning your friends."

Madame de Monte-Jan in reply wrote a very characteristic letter. Among other things she said—

"I would rather die than do anything of which I might have reason to repent; yet I will confess that the extreme necessity in which the death of the late marshal left me, almost made me trip in words. But heaven has so helped me, that here I am arrived in France, without being affianced, promised, or contracted to living man.... I am very much surprised the king should think I am going to bring him servants at the expense of my good fortune, and against my tastes. I will never be an Italian; and, if I were, the last man I should choose to make me so would be the Marquis Jehan-Loys—for reasons which I will give you when we meet, but, especially, because he is not, and never will be, a true Frenchman."

But in spite of this declaration, the beautiful Madame Philippes remained at Lyons, under the charge of this marquis, who spent twelve days in making the preparations, intending to arrive at court in magnificent style. When the party at length set out, their baggage was so enormous, and their train so numerous, that six great boats were filled. They did all their cooking on board. With them they took a band of fiddlers, engaged by the marquis to amuse him on the river, and alleviate the ennui of the lady for the loss of her husband. They embarked on the Loire at Romanne, and sent by land the horses and mules, which arrived as soon as they did at Briare.

M. de Vieilleville had news of their movements nearly every day by the courtiers who constantly passed on their way from Piedmont to the court; he went out from Paris as far as Corbeil, with about eighty horses, on the evening when the travellers arrived at Ersenne. He sent a messenger directly to Madame Philippes, informing her of his movements, and got back an answer not to show himself until the next day, at the dinner that was to take place at Juirzy. The lady appears to have been afraid that if the slightest suspicion of his intention had come to the marquis, he would have seized her and married her by force.

Vieilleville politely kept out of the way until the dinner was over, and then rode up with his troop. There were great reverence and salutations: and all these men began to talk as well about the good cheer they had enjoyed by the road, as about the adventures that necessarily happen in so long a journey. At a fitting opportunity, however, the lady slipped away; and, secretly calling the Sieur Plessia au Chat, a Brenton gentleman in her service, ordered him, as soon as they reached the Porte Saint Marceau, to disentangle her train from that of her suite, and move along the most, in the direction of the Porte Saint Gangnes, where they were, to stop whilst she bade adieu to the marquis.

Soon afterwards every one mounted, ladies and all; and this gorgeous brilliant train arrived in good time at Paris. At the gate Plessia au Chat carried out his instructions, and dexterously separated the lady's people from the others. The marquis, surprised, called out they mistook the way. But now, Madame Philippes pulling up, said—

"Sir, they are going where they ought; for your lodgings is in the Hotel des Ursins, in the Cloister of Notre Dame, and mine is in the Hotel Saint Denys, near the Augustines. My honor commands me not to lodge in your house, but to separate myself from you, which is why I now bid you adieu; but not, sir, without thanking you very humbly for your good company by the road. As to my part, of the expense, I have it all down in writing. Your Maistre d' Hotes and Plessis au Chat will settle matters so well together, that before a week is over we shall be quits: I mean as far as regards money; for my obligation to you will be eternal. Now, I beg to consider that this separation is only a bodily separation; I leave you my heart, which you will be pleased to keep." So saying, she kissed him and said, "Adieu, sir, we shall meet to-morrow at the king's lodgings."

The marquis was so astonished at this sudden change, that for a long time he could not utter a single word. His sighs and sobs, however, showed his anguish and his sadness. At last his presence of mind returned, and, looking at the lady in anything but a loving manner, he said—"Madam, your adieu gave my heart a pang; but your last words, and the kiss with which you have honored me, have somewhat revived me, though this sudden change and prompt resolution seem strange. To-morrow, as you say, we shall meet; but bear in mind the promises you have given me. Adieu, madam!"

Then the two companions parted; and Madam Philippes joyfully took her way in liberty to the Hotel St. Denys. The same evening, Vieilleville brought to her and introduced as a suitor the prince de la Rochesuryon, who was of royal blood, being brother to the duke of Montpensier. "If you will believe me, make this gentleman, as soon as possible, master of your person and your wealth, for all delay will be perilous," said he. The prince and Madame Philippes were pleased with one another, and exchanged promises.

Meanwhile the Marshal Dannebund, who had succeeded Marshal Monte-Jan in his governorship, had formed the project of succeedlng also to his widow and property. He therefore had written to the dauphine to plead his cause, and to represent that by putting their revenues together they might make up a hundred thousand livres a year, a very rare thing in France for any one but a prince. The dauphine came with this proposal, and strongly spoke in favor of Dannebund. "I know," said she, "that the marquis of Saluce is three times as rich, but his position is more uncertain. Besides, he is very disagreeable in person, with a big belly, fat, dirty, swarthy, and awkward. Whereas my candidate, as you know, is a very presentable fellow."

To this Madame Philippes replied by confirming her engagements with the prince—and the dauphine accordingly withdrew her proposal, because the king laid great stress on the alliance, and might exercise his absolute authority.

The marquis never passed a day without calling to his mistress; instead of finding her alone, he always met the Prince de la Rochesuryon, who thus became a very thorn in his side. By no means whatever could he obtain a tete-a-tete interview. So at last, unable to put up with his annoying position any longer, he suddenly began a legal action, and arraigned the lady before the parliament of Paris. This he did by express command of the king, who had the marriage very much at heart, though he did not like to use his own authority against the interests of a prince of his own blood.

Madame Philippes was much disturbed by the prospect of being forced to ally herself with her obstinate suitor; and we may be sure there were anxious consultations at the Hotel Saint Denys. When the day of trial came she appeared, accompanied by M. de Vieilleville, and many other lords and gentlemen, ladies and maidens. Every one expected a long and scandalous discussion. The first president began the proceedings by telling Madame Philippes to raise her hand and swear to tell the truth; one then asked her if she had not promised marriage to Monsieur le Marquis Jehan-Loys de Saluces, then present. The lady, forgetting all her hints and inuendoes, replied on her faith, No. The president was about to examine her closely, and the greffier had taken up his pen, when the fair defendant stepped forward, and in a firm voice uttered the following speech:—

"Messieurs, this is the first time I have ever been before a court of justice; and therefore I am afraid that timidity may make me contradict myself in my answers. But, to cut short all the subtleties in which you are so proficient, I now say and declare before you, gentlemen, and all present, that I swear to God and the king—to God eternal damnation of my soul—to the king on the confiscation of my honor and my life—that I never gave any promise of marriage to Monsieur le Marquis Jehan-Loys of Saluces; and what is more, never thought of doing so in my life. And if any one says the contrary, here (taking M. de Veilleville by the hand,) here is my knight, who is ready, saving his honor of this court, to prove that he villainously lies!"

This warlike demonstration, so much in harmony with the character of the period, and the chivalry which Francis the First was trying to revive, met with complete success.

"Here's a business!" exclaimed the president familiarly. "Greffier, you can pack up your papers. There is no writing to do. Madame la Marechale has taken another road, and a much shorter one." Then addressing the marquis, he said, "well, sir, what observation do you make on this incident?"

The marquis had glanced on his own portly person, and compared it with the material aspect of the lady's knight.

"I don't want a wife by force," said he. "If she won't have me, I won't have her: and there's an end."

With these words he made a low bow and left the court. Then M. de Vieilleville asked if the lady were not free to marry whom she liked, and, being answered in the affirmative, invited the whole company to come and be present at the betrothal between Madame Philippes and the prince de la Rochesuryon, which would take place immediately. But the wily lawyers declined, saying that they must deliberate and send a deputy to acquaint the king with what had taken place. One of them also whispered to the knight:

"You had a six months' trial before you if you had not been so clever. The marquis had an interrogatory of forty articles prepared as to expressions that had been publicly used by the lady to him and his people; as to the kisses she had given him by the way, especially the kiss at Porte Saint Marceau; and as to her saying to one Saint Julien (a circumstance that would have gone much against her,) that she would give him a chain of five hundred ecus for the wedding."

"Well, well," said Vieilleville smiling, "all we need say now is, that a Frenchwoman has outwitted a hundred Italians."

Thereupon the betrothal between Madame Philippes and the prince immediately took place; and in two or three days they were married at the Augustins without much ceremony, the bride being a widow. They lived happily together for twenty-five years, and had a son and a daughter; but the princess survived both her husband and her children, and died in fifteen hundred and seventy-eight, forty years after her curious journey from Turin to Paris.

THE INFIDEL AND THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

'Uncle Bob' was a great scholar. He had taken degrees both of 'physics' and 'divinity,' and was a student of many books besides those handled in colleges. He could quote texts from the Scriptures as well as from the infidel writers. I am sorry to say that he preferred reading the infidel. His little neice, Nettie, about twelve years of age, was a Christian, and she felt truly sorry for her Uncle Bob, and for all people who do not love God.

She said to him one day, 'Uncle, why don't you love God?'

'I do love my God?

'Who is that Uncle?'

'It is the beautiful—beautiful objects in nature and art.'

'Do you mean the Falls of Niagara and Crystal Palace?'

'Well—yes.'

'Who made the Falls, uncle?'

'I don't know, Nettie.'

'If you could see the one that made the Falls, uncle, would you love him?'

'If that could be, I should adore him.'

'I love him, uncle,' said the little girl, 'just as well as if I could see him. You must read about him in my new Bible.'

'I know the Bible, Nettie. It is nothing but a piece of Jewish mythological history.'

'Are there any prophecies in other mythologies, uncle?'

'Well no.'

'All the world knows, uncle, that the Bible prophecies have been fulfilled, and I should like to know if any kind of mythology has ever been spread all over the world and created love, and peace, and joy in the people's hearts, like the history of our Savior?'

Uncle Bob made no reply.

WHO ARE ARISTOCRATS?—Twenty years ago this one made candles, that one sold cheese and butter, another butchered, a forth carried on a distilery, another was a contractor on canals, others were merchants and mechanics. They are acquainted with both ends of society, as children will be after them—though it will not do to say it out loud.

For often you shall find that these toiling worms hatch butterflies—and they live about a year. Death brings a division of effects, and new financiers; the old gent is discharged, the young gent takes his revenue and begins to travel—towards poverty, which he reaches before death, or his children do if he does not. So that it is not hereditary; it is accessible to all. Three good seasons of cotton will send a generation of men up—a score of years will bring them all down, and send their children to labor. The father grubs and grows rich—his children strut and use the money. The children in turn inherit the pride and go to shiftless poverty; next their children, reinvigorated by fresh plebian blood and by the smell of the clod come up again.

Thus society, like a tree, draws its sap from the earth, changes it into leaves and blossoms, spreads them off to fall back to earth, again to mingle with the soil, and at length to re-appear in new dress and fresh garniture.

ONE OF THE DEPOSITORS.—At the Sixpenny Savings Bank, a little newsboy without a jacket, and only one suspender, (and that a string,) confronted the teller on Monday, and demanded to know whether 'She was all right'—meaning the Institution—'because if she was, he didn't mean to be scared if everybody else was. He'd got 42 cents salted down there, and all he wanted was his (the teller's) word of honor that it wouldn't spile.' The teller assured him that his money was ready for him at any moment. 'Nuff said 'tween gen'l men, but I don't want it,' rejoined the youth, and with a self complacent, well satisfied air, walked out of the bank. 'Is she good?' cried two or three other newsboys who were awaiting the result at the door steps. 'Yes siree!' he replied.—'As good as wheat. Keteh our Bank to stop! You ought to seed the gold I seed in der safe!' 'How much was they?' inquired a companion. More'n a house full' was his prompt response. 'An' yoos don's ketch dis'ere chile makin' an old woman of his self, and drawin' out his money; I ain't so green—I aint!'

HOW CAPTAIN TIGER GOT MARRIED.—Captain Tiger says: 'I courted her under singular circumstances. I won her through a rash vow. Thus: I saw her—loved her—I proposed—she refused.'

'You love another,' said I.

'Spare my blushes,' said she.

'I know him,' said I.

'You do,' said she.

'Very good,' I exclaimed. 'If he remains here I'll skin him.'

'I wrote him a note. I said it was a painful thing—and so it was. I said I had pledged my word as a gentleman, to skin him—my character was at stake—I had no alternative. As an officer in the United States service. I was bound to do it. I regretted the necessity, but it must be done. He was open to conviction. He saw that the rules of the service were imperative. He fled—I married her!'

☞ 'Here, you little rascal, walk up here, and give an account of your yourself sir—where have you been?'

'After the girls father.'

'Did you ever know me to do so, when I was a boy?'

'No, sir; but mother did.'

AN ACCOUNT THREE MILES LONG.—The last quarterly returns or account of the business of the New York city post office, which was received at the Department in this city in a day or two after the close of the quarter, if stretched out page by page continuously, would make a string of paper quite three miles long.—Washington Evening Star.

TO BUSINESS MEN GENERALLY.—Those who have established themselves successfully in business should advertise to retain that position.

Those who are but commencing in business should advertise to successfully establish themselves.

Discreet and judicious advertising is the very life of business. Those who neglect to avail themselves of its advantages injure themselves in trade, and consequently bestow the reward on others who advertise.

☞ We learn from the Charleston (S. C.) Courier that the bishops, clergy and lay members of the Episcopal Church, to whom the subject matter has been committed, will assemble in Montgomery, Ala., on the 25th of November to perfect plans for the establishment and endowment of a Southern University under the control of the church. It is expected, we understand, that the bishops of all the slaveholding States will be present, with two or three exceptions.

The Committee on Location will assemble in Montgomery on the 18th of November. Its Episcopal members are Right Rev. Bishops Otey, Polk, Rutledge, Elliott and Cobb.—Portsmouth Transcript.

UNNECESSARY GRUMBLING.—A Southern journal, commenting upon a certain class who have plenty to eat, drink and wear, and no liabilities in any way embarrassing, who yet croak in the most forlorn manner, and sigh plaintively for better times, tells the following apposite anecdote:

Tracy's slave, Pomp, in this town, many years ago, not content to draw wine from his master's pipe the usual way took the head out of the cask, and as he stood dipping up the sparkling beverage, and drinking from a silver goblet, gave the sentiment—"Here is to better times." His master happening in at that moment, struck him on the head, felling him to the floor, saying, "You black rascal you I will teach you that times are good enough when you can drink the best of wine from silver cups, without wishing for better".

ANECDOTE OF GOV. ALLSTON.—As the Governor was proceeding in his carriage to the parade ground, near Greenville, he overtook one of the bone and sinew of the land, when something like the following dialogue took place:

BONE AND SINEW.—I say, stranger, you have got a nice carriage and a plenty of room, s'pose you give Sal and me a lift to the review.

GOVERNOR.—Certainly, sir, you are welcome to a ride.

They thank him; get in, and ride some distance in silence.

BONE AND SINEW.—Stranger, you look like a mighty clever fellow: who mought you be?

GOVERNOR.—Well, some call me the Governor of the State.

BONE AND SINEW.—Gra-a-a-te Je-e-rusalem! Sal, git out o' here.

And sure enough, they got out, as no solicitation could avail to make them ride with a live Governor. They would as soon have sat by a rattlesnake.

THE TERRIBLE EXPLOSION IN PERSIA.—Sindian of August 15th, has the following translation of a Persian letter received from Joudpore, giving an account of the terrible explosion there, briefly mentioned in the foreign news yesterday:

'On the night of the 10th of August, between twelve and two, heavy rain fell, accompanied with heavy peals of thunder and vivid flashes of lightning. A few minutes after the scene was repeated with tenfold violence. In the fort belonging to the rajah, situated on a hill, constructed of stones of various sizes, and containing a passage subterraneous, the magazine of the rajah had been kept. This was struck with lightning, and some thousands of pounds of powder were exploded.

'The shock was so great that the walls of the fort and a temple and four ponderous gates were blown up in the air into a thousand pieces, destroying 500 houses and all the people living therein. Up to the time of writing, the remnants of the inhabitants were engaged in removing the dead bodies from under these ruins. It was gleaned from the Kotwal of that place, that upwards of one thousand had already been taken out, and that others were also being removed. The domestic servants of the rajah as well as some Sepoys who were kept to guard the place, were all killed.'

Such a dreadful occurrence was never known in Joudpoure before. The majority of the people were destroyed and otherwise injured. A stone weighing one pound was picked up at Soarsanugger Talao, four miles from Joudpore. Another large stone fell at Chowpassaney, six miles away, where, falling on a house, it killed three people.

LABOR.

As the world grows older, the repugnance to labor exhibits itself in a ten-fold degree. There is something in the idea of "work" that has a nauseating effect upon the gastric functions of the rising generation. A mania exists to play the "gentleman," a disposition runs rampant to live the life of a "genteel" drone: to consume without producing; to exist without furnishing the means to live upon. Labor is incompatible with respectability: the laboring man is necessarily a plebian; a man of low degree, a serf, or something worse. Such are the opinions prevalent among the would-be aristocracy of the present day—opinions that lead to lamentable and disastrous consequences, seen in the thousands and tens of thousands of young men in our country, without the means to live upon, and destitute of an honorable calling that will furnish them the bread of life; leading a career of dissipation and idleness, and ending with crime or closing their course by a last step into the drunkard's grave.

God has said that man shall earn his bread by the sweat of his brow; how then can a fulfillment of this command be disreputable? Why should he who, using the gifts and endowments giving him by his Creator, whether from necessity or choice, for the benefit of himself and his fellow man, in contributing something to the world's stock; in adding to the works of genius or art, be regarded as lacking in respectability or wanting dignity or refinement. Those ideas, indeed, are not confined to the opulent, the influential or the aristocratical; if so, the evils resulting from them would be of small moment. It is found among those who, destitute of the means to live at ease; too proud to "work" and too poor to live without it, are the mere apes of fashion, and the miserable imitators of "high life." The show and glitter found in the palaces of the wealthy, and the gay and dashing appearance of the slaves of fashion, have a peculiar influence upon the delicate organizations of these aspiring spirits. The consequence is a stinting of the inner man, that broadcloths and silks may cover the external; that pride and illeness are found where honest toil and creative genius should be contributing to a life of happiness and independence. Such characters are the make shift associates of the "upper ten," who regard them with contempt, and tolerate them as subjects of jest and ridicule. There is nothing in labor to be ashamed of. The sun burnt face, and the hard and flinty hand should ever be the passport to respect and consideration.—The drone who lives upon the labor of others, is a moth for which the world has no demand. For the "bone and sinew of the land;" the industrious artisan; the honest and hardy creator of all that is grand and stupendous in art has claims that can never be disregarded by the truly refined and intelligent.

None can look upon the splendid productions of the labor of our country: the grand and magnificent specimens of art that stand the wonder and admiration of the beholder; the rich and gorgeous handiwork that attract and dazzle; the wonderful creations of genius and skill that leads us to doubt the limits of man's power, and feel that the master mind that designed, or the hands that gave them form or finish, deserves an inferior place in the scale of social existence. If so, the thought is the off-spring of bloated ignorance, presumption and disgusting pride.

The polished brass that ornaments the ponderous machine that urges the proud leviathan through the mighty deep, is of no value compared to the stern unyielding metal that gives strength and power to the herculean engine. Its exquisite symmetry, nice proportions, and beautiful workings, though destitute of gloss of polish, will rivet the gaze and excite the admiration of all who prefer utility to show, and worth to outward brilliancy. The proud, the idle, and the aristocracy is the brass of society; the laboring man, though rougher, is the truly valuable material by which it is kept in motion. The pampered and licentious slave of fashion, rolling in extravagance and rioting in luxuries for which the sweat and toil of others have paid, may receive the homage of ignorance, and win the imitation of apes; but he who, by the aid of a clear head and a stalwart arm, converts the wilderness into a busy city, teeming with life and activity; forms from the rough fabric the noblest specimens of art, moulds the shapeless mass into the richest trophies of genius, transforms the unsightly block into an object of use, beauty, and adoration, and from the bowels of the earth drags the treasure that ministers to and sustains the wants of man, must command the respect of the truly wise, and must receive from the cultivated mind the consideration justly his due. More anon.

THE REPLY OF THE SENTINEL.

We predicted that after two weeks of deep thought and serious consideration on the part of the Editor of the Sentinel, we should have in his promised reply, "something rich." Well, the offspring of his genius has been "ushered into this breathing world," rather more "than half made up," yet "lamely and unfashionable," but still with points curious to look upon. It is a prodigy in its way, and we most emphatically declare that we have not been "disappointed."

The father of this anomalous bantling, with the modesty so peculiarly his own, caused the following notice to be appended to the lower margin of its outer garment:

"We are sorry to disappoint the editor of the Pioneer, but the fault is his, for it is impossible for us or any body else to give "something rich" when having the Pioneer as a subject to write on."

We ask permission to dissent from the above. We love justice, and can not allow such self-sacrificing modesty to deprive our neighbor of that which is preeminently his due. Three columns and a half, and not contain "something rich"! Claim your own, Mr. Sentinel, and if you will not, we shall at least have "rendered unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's," when we insist, that you have given us "something" so very "rich" that it will bear creditably the three degrees of comparison. It is true that this production is a pigmy for its age, nevertheless we are borne out in our opinion by calling attention to the following, which we must call the positive:

"He calls our paper the brilliant luminary of knownothism. We thank him for the compliment, and regret that we cannot return the favor, as our rule is always to keep on the side of truth, or else we could style the Pioneer "the brilliant luminary of Pasquotank" Democracy. But as there is nothing brilliant about the Pioneer or its party, we cannot say so and have the truth on our side."

There now, is not that "rich," though ungenerous? Could not return our "compliment," because "there is nothing brilliant about the Pioneer." How mortifying! If we had "tears to shed," we should most assuredly "shed them now;" but we hain't.

COMPARATIVE; RICHER.

"You are right, our "intellectual engine" whether "mighty" or not, will always be found on the track, ready at all times to try its speed with any loco foco one that can be trotted out."

"Clear the track, and let this "2:40" pass. Who's afraid? Not this Know Nothing, Whig, steam trotting machine, the American Sentinel, no sir-ee! Read and ponder!

SUPERLATIVE. Richest

"We knew that the Editor of the South done homage to the master while denouncing his slave—and when we said that the South was down on the administration, we wished to be understood as saying that, that paper was down on Walker, and being down on Walker, had as a matter of course to be down on the administration, for he was appointed by the administration. We hope the Pioneer is satisfied on that score."

"Pioneer satisfied"! We should be the most unreasonable of mortals if we were not after an exposition as lu-cid as the above. Why, neighbor, it is equal to your illustration of Sec. Cobb's Sub-Treasury scheme, and sun shine was a fool to that.

To notice seriously the mass of verbiage that occupies three and a half columns of the last Sentinel, is more than we have the mental ability, physical strength, space, time, or patience to do.

It is a dish served up without spice or seasoning, insipid and tasteless. It is but a rehash of stale and exploded charges culled from every stump speech made by the opposition in the last twenty years, and which the authors would feel ashamed to read; and the veriest political tyro in the land would not dare repeat, if he valued his reputation. In substantiation of what we say, we will annex three of the charges to be found in the vast catalogue of the Sentinel, premising that if the Editor was not an old acquaintance of ours, we should be tempted to question his earnestness in reproducing them, thinking that perchance he was upon the stool of repentance and intended to perpetrate a burlesque upon his old friends. This idea, however, is not to be entertained, and we can only account for it upon the hypothesis of his being non compos mentis. Here are the charges:

"On another page of the "undying pages" will be seen the remarks of Franklin Pierce advocating the reception of abolition petitions in the U. S. Senate in 1837.

"On another of the "undying pages" will be seen the instructions to Robert J. Walker, to make Kansas a free State, furnished him by and through the dictation of the Abolition President of the United States—Mr. James Buchanan, and which instructions he has followed to the letter and accomplished the object of his mission with the utmost said faction to his master.

"On another of the "undying pages" will be seen the grand exploits of the United States marines, composed of Irish, Dutch and Scotch, in the streets of the Capitol of our country, when ordered to shoot down native born citizens, for daring to assert their constitutional rights at the ballot box."

There is only one point in the article which we shall deem worthy of further comment, and that will be found in another place.

THE WESTMINSTER REVIEW for October, is upon our table. Besides the other good things found in this number, we would particularly call attention to the article on "Female dress." It is capital and well worth a perusal.

☞ Our thanks are tendered the Hon. Asa Biggs for a copy of the Smithsonian Report for 1856.

☞ It will be remembered that the article in the "Pioneer" which called forth the strictures of the Sentinel, related exclusively to the sectional differences likely to agitate the next Congress. This was made the basis of a violent tirade against the Democratic party, by that sheet, and an explicit declaration that the differences were produced by the action of the Democratic party in selecting Mr. Van Buren as ther candidate in 1840. That there may be no mistake upon this point, we give the exact language of the Sentinel. The italics are our own.

"Grant the argument—who broke up these friendly feelings? The Democratic party when it took upon its shoulders that traitor to the South, Martin Van Buren, and tried to re-elevate him to the seat once occupied by Washington."

The impression sought to be made by the Sentinel could not be mistaken: if in the above, certainly not when it says—"Yes, in 1840, the old hero, Gen. Harrison, was elected over the combined factions of the Democratic party."

The intention is plain—that Mr. Van Buren, a "traitor to the South," and an abolitionist, was selected as the candidate of the Democratic party, and received the support of the anti-slavery men, and that this was the origin of the sectional controversy in Congress, for the Sentinel declares that this "broke up those friendly feelings." We convicted the Sentinel of historical inacuracy, by showing that the slavery agitation existed as far back as 1820—not to go farther in the past—when Missouri applied for admission. We wish it distinctly remembered that our article treated of the troubles in Congress, and that the Sentinel explicitly asserted them to have commenced in 1840. How does that paper now seek to extricate itself from the dilemma in which it finds itself? By gravely telling, what every school boy knows or should know, that the attempt made by the abolitionists was in 1840, and that instead of Van Buren being the sectional candidate, Birney was the man and received 7000 votes. If Van Buren was a "traitor to the South" and an abolitionist, why was a separate candidate selected, and why did not the Sentinel say in its first article that Birney was the candidate of the anti-slavery men? Why this "suppression" of historical facts, and an implied if not an express declaration that Mr. Van Buren received the abolition vote? We denied emphatically that Van Buren was a "traitor to the South," previous to his Texas letter,—after which he was repudiated by the Democratic party. We defied the Sentinel to prove the contrary. Has it done it? Has it even attempted it? Not a bit of it! It has evaded the issue by parading a well known fact and expects to escape under its cover. It can not be done. The canvass of 1840 had nothing to do with the question in Congress, and the Sentinel knows it—Slavery agitation existed there many years previous, and the course of the abolitionists in running Birney was the effect and not the cause; and if the Sentinel is to be taken as authority, neither party is responsible for that "cause"—from which we most emphatically dissent—for it says, "abolition petitions were presented and voted for by Whigs and Democrats!" The Sentinel cannot by any process of reasoning extricate itself from this dilemma.

☞ The editor of the "Sentinel" after giving his readers the reason of his visit to Raleigh says:

"If the editor of the Pioneer knew this fact, he has done us wrong, and wilfully misrepresented us, and therefore is guilty of suppressing the facts in this case at least. The editor justifies his attack on us while absent from our post, on the ground that we treated him so while he was regaling himself at Nag's Head."

We are not in the habit of inquiring into the business of our neighbors, and knew nothing of the business that carried the editor to Raleigh until it was too late to make the correction. When we were informed of the fact, we desired to change that portion of our article, but was told by the publisher that it was too late. So much for so much.

Can any man read our strictures in our last issue, and come to the conclusion that we justified our defence against the wanton attack of the "Sentinel," upon the ground that we were treated in like manner by the "Sentinel" when at Nag's Head? No such justification was entered. In the first place it needed no justification except the plain one of self-defence. If it did, our ignorance of his absence would have been sufficient. His attack upon us whilst we were at Nag's Head was thrown in to show the little cause he had to complain. We state now, as we stated then, that his absence or his presence would not have altered our course.

He seeks however to get out of the scrape, by asserting that we had time to reply to his article; well, grant it; the allotted time was from 12 o'clock Saturday night, until 6 o'clock Monday morning. The time was enough in all conscience What will then be thought of the Sentinel's reason for not answering our defence, having from Saturday evening, say 7 o'clock until the Saturday morning following, giving as an excuse the session of the Superior Court These columns required some time it is true, we therefore give in to the excuse.

☞ The Editor of the Sentinel thinks that as the "owl" is "said to be a bird of wisdom," the foot of the bird must necessarily partake of the "wisdom" of its owner. We admit the supposition to be correct, and will therefore in all kindness tender the said "foot" to our neighbor, with the advice to wear it in his hat, that his craninm cover may for once contain the modicum of an article with which it has never before been permitted to form an acquaintance. The "horny portion" being long may serve him another purpose. If by any accident an idea may have been buried within his cranium, and which, like Capt Kidd's treasure, no mortal power has ever been able to exhume, a probe or application of these same "horny portions" may bring the precious jewel to light. We however doubt the existence of any such thing, and leave it to him to decide if it be worth the trial.

From the Boston Post.

IS IT BEST TO FIGHT WITH THE SOUTH?

"We are all interested in free labor.—The commercial man is interested. It is that which freights his ships, &c.

N. P. Banks in Faneuil Hall, Aug. 15.

Let us see how this applies to the exports from this country for a few years past.

For the year ending June 30, 1850, as shown by the last treasury report, our total exports amounted to $1 136,946,912—Value of cotton $71,984,616; tobacco, $9,-951,023. Making a liberal estimate on the products of the sea, forest, and giving all the exports of specie to the North during the year, the products of free labor going to freight ships, outward bound, did not exceed forty millions, or less than one-third of the total exports.

In 1851 our total exports amounted to $195,489,718, of which the North furnished less than one-fourth—say $45,000,000. The South furnished $112,815,317 in cotton alone, and $9,219,251 in tobacco.

In 1852 the total exports were $192,-368,984. Giving thirty-seven millions of specie to the North, she exported only about $72,000,000, or a little more than one-third. The value of cotton exported by the South was $87,965,733; tobacco $10,-031,283.

In 1853 the total exports were $113,-417,697. Giving the North, again all the specie—twenty-three and a half millions—she exported only some $63,000,000, or less than one-third again. The South furnished in cotton $109,456,404, and in tobacco $11,319,319.

In 1854 the total exports were $253,-390,870 Including all the specie, some thirty-eight millions, the North could not have exported more than $90,000,000, or a little more than a third. The South sent not more than that in cotton alone, $93,-596,220,) and $10,016,046 in tobacco.

In 1855 the total exports were $246,-708,533. Giving, again, the specie to the North, (some fifty-four millions,) she exported less than $104,000,000, or about two-fifths only. Cotton, $88,143,844; tobacco, $14,712,468.

In 1856 the total exports were $319,-586,330, with forty millions of specie included, the North exported less than $110,-000,000—say one third only. The South furnished more than that in cotton alone, ($128,382,251,) and $12,221,843 in tobacco.

It seems, therefore, by the figures, that when Mr. Banks undertakes to enlighten commercial men, he either knows not what he is talking about, or else for low, sectional ends, he intentionally misstates the truth. Cotton alone freights more than two-thirds of our outward-bound vessels.

The following table will show how large a proportion of our imports, including silks, satins, and embroideries, principally consumed at the North, it has actually paid for for six years past:

	Value of Imports, including specie.	Value of Cotton exported.
1850	$178,138,318	$71,984,616
1851	216,224,932	112,815,317
1852	212,945,442	87,955,732
1853	267,978,647	109,456,404
1854	304,562,381	93,596,220
1855	261,468,529	88,143,844
1856	314,639,942	128,382,351

Under these circumstances, is it worth while for New England business men longer to wage war against the South—quarrel with their own bread and butter—simply to gratify the aspirations of such superlative demagogues and political weathercocks as Nathaniel P. Banks?

THE RESULT OF THE ELECTION.

It will be seen by the returns published elsewhere that the American party have carried the State in the Executive and Legislative departments The State officers are Come Mr. Standard, no 'showing partiality' as the boys say; we have not the least doubt of our neighbor's just claim to 'that knife;' so be starring yourself and pass it over.

NEW YORK ELECTIONS.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—The Tribune of this morning concedes that the Republicans are defeated by from 10,000 to 20,000, and says the Democratic vote is about the same as at the last election, while 10,000 voters abstained from voting. The Senate is probably Republican. The House is Democratic.

GOVERNOR OF OHIO ELECTED BY NEGROES.

The Clearland Plain Dealer states that the negro vote, cast in the recent election in Ohio, to be estimated at from 1,200 to 1,500. That we believe, is also just about Chase's majority, so that he may be said to be elected by negroes.

WISCONSIN ELECTION.

MILWAUKIE, Nov. 5.—Randall is undoubtedly elected by five thousand majority.—The Republicans have a majority in both branches of the Legislature.

Correspondence of the Pioneer.

PORTSMOUTH, Va. Nov. 6th, 1857.

DEAR PIONEER: The much dreaded Maryland election has taken place, and resulted, with but little disorder, in a complete and decisive K. N triumph. Their plurality in Baltimore City amounts to about 10,000, a gain of some 2500 votes on Mr. Fillmore's majority, and this increase is, I think, in a great degree, the result of Gov. Ligon's interference in the municipal affairs;—it is stated that native democrats voted the K. N. ticket by hundreds, wholely and solely on that account. The Gov. no doubt had the good of the city, and the protection of the citizens at heart, but, that he acted prematurely in the matter, is the prevalent opinion among all who are informed of the concomitant circumstances.

The Democracy claim the State of New York by from 10,000 to 15,000 majority, although the result is yet considered doubtful. Massachusetts is indissolubly wedded to Black Republicanism; Banks has a large plurality in the State, and both branches of the Legislature are strongly Republican.

"Our colored bretheren" are now having some fine sport down town,—they are moving a house from its original situation on High St, between Dinwiddie and Crabb Sts. It was occupied as law offices and is removed to give place to a fine brick building for a cabinet warehouse. The interest felt in its removal is considerable, from the fact that the one who first undertook it could not accomplish it, and it has been standing in the street several days. It is now slipping on quite briskly, and the songs of the darkies, as they tug at the ropes, afford a rich treat to lovers of good music.

Government work is becoming more and more brisk, and as necessarily follows private work also. In the Navy Yard, besides the construction of the steam sloop of war refered to in my last letter, the old Ship of the Line Columbus, which for many years has been laid up in ordinary, is to de razeed and fitted for sea. The various Yard improvements will be continued and it will again, as heretofore, present a scene of activity and industry commensurate with its importance as a naval Station.

Preparations for the Fair are still continued with unabated vigor, and nothing will be undone to make it agreable and attractive to the visitor. The Refreshment Hall is in the charge of two gentlemen of Norfolk, who will make it what it should be. I hear that Gov. Wise has been invited to deliver the address connected with the presentation of a stand of colors to the Volunteer Regiment of this place—whether he will except or not is yet unknown.—The ceremony will take place on the third day of the fair, Thursday Nov. 12th at 1 o'clock P. M. Many from your State doubtless purpose attending this fair, and to such I would say, they will have no cause to regret it. They will meet with a cordial welcome and true hospitality.

The people of Norfolk are urging the speedy completion of the water line of Virginia, in a very eloquent pamphlet setting forth the natural advantages of the place, and the economy with which a trade avenue may be opened by water connections to Cairo, the commanding port of nearly 10,000 miles of Steamboat trade; it shows the facility with which; by the contemplated connection, Norfolk can commandt he trade of the entire West, the enchancement of business and property resulting therefrom, and gives an array of facts and figures for the consideration of those disposed to calculate the posibility of the enterprise.

The Statue of Washington for the monument has arrived at Richmond safely.—This monument when completed will be a magnificent affair,—equal to anything of the kind in the country; it will add much to the embellishment of capitol square and will be well worthy a visit.

ERO.

GOOD ADVICE.

'Keep good company or none. Never be idle. If your hands cannot be usefully employed, attend to the cultivation of your mind. Always speak the truth. Make few promises. Live up to your engagements. Keep your own secrets if you have any. When you speak to a person, look him in the face. Good company and good conversation are the very sinews of virtue. Your character cannot be injured except by your own acts. If any one speaks evil of you, let your life be such that no one will believe him. Good character is above all things else. Drink no kind of intoxicating liquors. Ever live, misfortunes excepted, within your income. When you retire to bed think over what you have been doing during the day.—Make no haste to be rich, if you would prosper. Small and steady gains give competency, with tranquility of mind.—Never play at any game of chance. Avoid temptation, through fear you may not withstand it. Earn money before you spend it. Never run into debt unless you see a way to get out again. Never borrow, if you can possibly avoid it. Do not marry until you are able to support a wife. Never speak evil of any one. Be just before you are generous. Keep yourself innocent, if you would be happy. Save when you are old. Read over the above maxims at least twice a week."

☞ Parson Brownlow assures the rest of mankind that, before he would join the Democratic party, he would see somebody, we don't remember who, deeper in HELL than a sledgehammer would fall in a thousand years, or some other very long time, not recollected. This is some relief. We had some fears that Brownlow, and perhaps others of his kind, might take a crazy notion into their heads that they could be Democrats, and attempt to inflict themselves upon the party. If his word can be relied upon, we are safe from that calamity

RICH EDITORS.—An exchange says that editors are, as a general thing, not overstocked with worldly goods. Humbug, says the Huron (Wis.) Argus. Here we are, editor of a country paper, fairly rolling in wealth. We have a good office, a bobbed barrel rifle, seven suits of clothes, three kittens, a Newfoundland puppy, two gold watches, thirteen day and two night shirts, carpet on our floor, a pretty wife, our own cow and calf, twenty-three cents in cash, are out of debt, and have no rich relatives.

NEW JERSEY ELECTIONS.

TRENTON, Nov. 5.—The Democrats have elected six out of eight of the Senators. The Senate will stand 15 Dem. to 6 opposition. The House will stand Democrats 35, opposition 25.

"OLD KENTUCK."

A Kentuckian at the battle of New Orleans, who disdained the restraint of a soldier's life, with his name upon the muster roll preferred 'goin' it alone alone,' fighting upon his own hook. While the battle was raging the fiercest and the shot was flying thick as hail, carrying death wherever they fell. 'Kentuck' might have been seen stationed under a tall maple loading and firing his rifle, as perfectly unconcerned as though he was 'picken deer.' Every time he brought his rifle to his shoulder, a red coat bit the dust. At last he happened to attract the attention of 'Old Hickory,' who supposed he had become seperated from his company and rode up to him to bring him behind the redoubts as he was in a position that exposed him to the fire of the enemy.

'Hallo! my man what regiment do you belong to?' said the General.

'Regiment, he—ll! answered Kentuck, "hold on yonder's another of em!" and bringing his shooting iron to his shoulder, he ran his eye along the barrel—a flash followed; another Englishman came tumbling to the ground.

"Whose company do you belong to?' again inquired the General.

"Company the d—l! was the reply of Kentuck as he busied himself reloading, 'See that ar feller with the gold fixins on his coat and hoss? Jist watch me perforate him!'

The General gazed in the direction indicated by the rifle, and observed a British officer. Kentuck pulled trigger, and the gallant Britain followed his companions that his Kentuck foe had laid low in death that day.

'Hurrah for old Kentusk,' shouted the free fighter, as his victim came topling from his horse, then turning to the General, he said, 'I'm fightin' on my own hook, stranger,' and he leisurely proceeded to reload.

BEAU HICKMAN IN A NEW YORK COURT. The New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Mercury has the following in regard to that distinguished financier, Beau Hickman, Esq., who visited New York lately to regulate monetary affairs in that quarter:

A rich scene came off the other day in the Marine Court. Your readers will all remember the celebrated Beau Hickman. Beau has been staying here for some weeks past at the Florence Hotel, where his bills are paid by his friends in the gambling and sporting lines. On Thursday Beau was subpœnaed as a witness in the above court. The attorney on the opposite side was a regular tartar. He prides himself upon his skill in examining witnesses, and claims that he can confuse a witness more successfully than any other member of the bar. One of his methods of doing this is, when the witness hesitates to snap at him like an angry terrier, worry and abuse him for his hesitation, and then seek to confound and embarrass him.

Before this man Beau was brought up for cross-examination. Beau took the stand, and, after giving his testimony in a very mild and timid manner, was handed over for cross-questioning to this keen set lawyer. He had, in his direct testimony, affirmed that the sharp lawyer's client had 'no money whatever.' The counsellor, with a look at Beau such as a hungry dog gives at a bone, asked:

'How do you know, Mr. Hickman, that my client had no money? Are you the keeper of his pocket book?'

'He told me so, sir.'

'When did he tell you so?'

'This morning.'

'Where, sir?'

'In this very room.'

'What did he say, sir? Come, give us his very words—none of your inferences, sir.'

'I don't like to answer that question.'

'Ho, ho! So you're afraid to answer that question, are you? I know I should drive you into a close corner. Come, out with it, and none of your skirking here.'

'I should rather be excused.'

'Then I shall appeal to the court to commit you for contempt.'

'Well, sir, if I must answer, he told me this morning that he had no money.'

'Well, sir, what language did he use?'

'Why, I asked him to loan me half a dollar, and he told me he couldn't, for you had robbed him of every cent of his money, and if he didn't get out of your clutches very soon, his children would starve.'

The lawyer had no further questions to ask. A roar of laughter arose in the court which required some trouble to check, and by the time the lawyer had collected his thoughts again, the case was decided against him.

"OLD PUT."—On one occasion during the Revolution, "Old Put" had received a lot of new recruits and as he had some fighting which he wished to do before long, and wanted none but willing men, he drew up his men before him. "Now boys," said he, "I don't wish to retain any of you who wish to leave; therefore if any of you is dissatisfied, and wishes to return home, he may signify the same by stepping six paces in front of the line.—But," added the old war dog, "I'll shoot the first man that steps out."

LOUISIANA ELECTIONS.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 4.—The Democratic State ticket is elected. Taylor, anti, and Slidell Dem., are re-elected to Congress; also, Eustis, American. The others two probably are anti-Slidell Democrats.

CONFERENCE NOTICE

I am authorized by the President of the Chowan Steamboat Company to say that a steamer will leave Black Water on Tuesday, the 17th Nov., on the arrival of the Express train from Portsmouth, for the purpose of taking the preachers and visitors to the annual Conference to be held in Elizabeth City, commencing the 18th November. There will be another boat on Wednesday, the day on which the Conference begins, and every other day afterward, except Sunday, until the close of the session. Preachers and visitors will pass at half price. JAS. E RIDDICK,

Oct. 27–3t. P. E.

MARRIED,

In this county, on the 31 inst., by Rev. J. J. Lanadell, Mr. CHARLES L. STOKLEY to Mrs. MARTHA A. BANKS.

DEATHS.

Died in this town, on the 3d inst., Mr. ROBERT POOL, aged 47 years.

Died at the residence of John C. Ehringhaus, Esq., in this town, Miss MARGARETT KNOX, aged about 22 years.

Died in Norfolk, on Sunday evening, the 1st instant, after a brief but painful illness, MARGIE P., infant daughter of Bernard R. and Kate Hardlog, aged 3 months.

Died at the residence of Rev. Jos. Turner, in this town, on Thursday last, Mrs. MARGARET A. TURNER, consort of John W. Turner, aged 19 years 7 months and 13 days. The sudden [illegible] this notice had but a few months ago, joined her destinies with him who has now to mourn her death; and now the young bride that [illegible] the heart of her devoted husband with so much joy lies silent in the tomb. In her a mother, husband, brothers and sisters deplore the loss of a faithful wife, and devoted and loving sister. Let them, together with all her [illegible] friends, have the sweet consolation, that she has exchanged this world for a far better one, where there is no sorrow nor parting known.

"The earthly part remains below:
Impure, to Heaven it could not go:
The earthly part—we see it now,
We see it in that clay-cold brow.
We hide what once we loved far more
Than eastern gems or golden ore,
The soul of fire, the gem of life,
Have flown above the earthly strife:
The lovely spirit has winged its way
To one pure, bright, eternal day.

In this Town, on Monday, the 9th November, after a lingering illness, SARAH M. SCOTT, aged 24. It is the feelings of regret, but rarely expressed, that we are forced to record the death of this estimable lady. In the bloom of life, with a mind highly cultivated, possessing in an eminent degree the graces and virtues that render female [illegible] the most lovely, surrounded by friends who knew her but to love, and hundred in whose hearts her virtues was enshrined—and among them a grandfather, bending beneath the weight of many years, who has lived to see the last of his children laid beneath the sod, and like the huge old oak that has been shorn of its limbs by storm and tempest, yet stands the relic of an age past—she has been made the [illegible] mark for death's relentless dart, and before his unerring aim she has fallen. The tomb has claimed its victim, angels were near to bear the immortal spirit to the bosom of its Redeemer.

TWO VALUABLE FARMS FOR SALE.

THE UNDERSIGNED wishing to quit the business offers at private sale, his TWO FARMS known as the "Sutton and Morrice Farms," on "Turkey Ridge" in Perquimans County, N. C.

For beauty and rich land both of the said Farms equal if not surpass any in the Eastern part of North Carolina. The part of the two Farms under cultivation is very productive and desirable to the Farmer. An opportunity of purchasing land of such extra quality is seldom offered. The first tract contains about SEVEN HUNDRED ACRES, the second FIVE HUNDRED and over. Both of the said Farms may be converted into one if required. They have on them two good tenements and out buildings, and convenient to two Landings for shipping. It lies in a compact body, but may be easily divided into several tracts.

All persons wishing to examine the land, are respectfully invited to call and see for themselves. The undersigned will take pleasure in riding over and showing the land.

I will offer for sale upon liberal terms of credit, provided such security as required be given.

A RETIRED PHYSICIAN

(Whose sands of life have nearly run out, discovered while in the East Indies, a certain cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and General Debility. The remedy was discovered by him when his only child, a daughter, was given up to die. He had heard much of the wonderful restorative and healing qualities of preparations made from the East India Hemp, and the thought occurred to him that he might make a remedy for his child. He studied hard and succeeded in realizing his wishes. His child was cured, and is now alive and well. He has since administered the wonderful remedy to thousands of sufferers in all parts of the world, and he has never failed in making them completely healthy and happy. Wishing to do as much good as possible, he will send to such of his afflicted fellow-beings as request it, this receipt, with full and explicit directions for making it up, and successfully using it. He requires each applicant to inclose him one shilling—three cents to be returned as postage on the receipe, and the remainder to be applied to the payment of this advertisement.

BALTIMORE LOCK HOSPITAL.

DOCTOR JOHNSTON,

THE founder of this Celebrated Institution, offers the most certain, speedy, and only effectual remedy in the world for Gleets, Strictures, Seminal weakness, Pains in the Loins, Constitutional Debility, Impotency, Weakness of the Back and Limbs, Affections of the Kidneys, Palpitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Nervous Irritability, Disease of the Head, Throat, Nose or Skin, and all those serious and melancholy Disorders arising from the destructive habits of Youth, which destroy both body and mind. These secret and solitary practices are more fatal to their victims than the song of the Syrens to the mariners Ulysses, blighting their most brilliant hopes of anticipations, rendering marriage, &c., impossible.

YOUNG MEN

especially, who have become the victims of Solitary Vice, that dreadful and destructive habit, which annually sweeps to an untimely grave thousands of young men of the most exalted talents and brilliant intellects, who might otherwise have entranced listening Senates with the thunders of eloquence, or waked to ecstacy the living lyre, may call with all confidence.

Marriage.

Married persons, or Young Men contemplating marriage, being aware of physical weakness, organic debility, deformities, &c., should immediately consult Dr. Johnston, and be restored to perfect health.

He who places himself under the care of Dr. Johnston, may religiously confide in his honor as a gentleman, and confidently rely upon his skill as a Physician.

Organic Weakness

immediately cured and full vigor restored.

This disease is the penalty most frequently paid by those who have become the victims of improper indulgencies. Young persons are too apt to commit excesses from not being aware of the dreadful consequences that may ensue.—Now, who that understands the subject will pretend to deny that the power of Procreation is lost sooner by those falling into improper habits than by the prudent? Besides being deprived of the pleasure of having offspring, the most serious and destructive symptoms to both body and mind arise. The system becomes deranged; the physical and mental powers weakened, nervous debility, dyspepsia, palpitation of the heart, indigestion, a wasting of the frame, cough, symptoms of consumption, &c.

OFFICE—No. 7, South Frederick Street, Seven Doors from Baltimore St., East side, up the steps. ☞ Be particular in observing the name and number, or you will mistake the place.

A Cure Warranted, or no Charge Made, in from One to Two Days.

NO MERCURY OR NAUSEOUS DRUGS USED.

DR. JOHNSTON,

Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, London, Graduate from one of the most eminent Colleges of the United States, and the greater part of whose life has been spent in the Hospitals of London, Paris, Philadelphia, and elsewhere, has effected some of the most astonishing cures that were ever known. Many troubled with ringing in the ears and head when asleep, great nervousness, being alarmed at sudden sounds, and bashfulness, with frequent blushing, attended, sometimes, with derangement of mind, were cured immediately.

A Certain Disease.

When the misguided and imprudent votary of pleasure finds he has imbibed the seeds of this painful disease, it too often happens that an ill-timed sense of shame, or dread of discovery, deters him from applying to those who from education and respectability, can alone befriend him, delaying till the constitutional symptoms of this horrid disease make their appearance, such as ulcerated sore throat, diseased nose, nocturnal pains in the head and limbs, dimness of sight, deafness, nodes on the shin bones and arms, blotches on the head, face and extremities, progressing with frightful rapidity, till at last the palate of the mouth or the bones of the nose fall in, and the victim of this awful disease becomes a horrid object of commiseration, till death puts a period to his dreadful sufferings. By sending him to 'that bourne from whence no traveler returns.' To such therefore Dr. Johnston pledges himself to preserve the most inviolable secrecy, and from his extensive practice in the first Hospitals of Europe and America, he can confidently recommend a safe and speedy cure to the unfortunate victim of this horrid disease.

It is a melancholy fact, that thousands fall victims to this dreadful disease, owing to the unskillfulness of ignorant pretenders, who, by the use of that dreadful poison, mercury, ruin the constitution, and either send the unfortunate sufferer to an untimely grave, or else make the residue of his life miserable.

Take Particular Notice!

Dr. J. addresses all those who have injured themselves by improper indulgencies and solitary habits which ruin both body and mind, unfitting them for either Business, Study, Society or Marriage.

These are some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, viz:—Weakness of the Back and Limbs, Pains in the Head, Dimness of Sight, Loss of Muscular Power, Palpitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Nervous Irritability, Derangement of the Digestive Functions

SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE.

BY authority of a decree of the Circuit Court of Norfolk County, pronounced on the 7th day of October, 1857, in a suit therein, in which Sarah E. Whidbee, guardian of Sally Whidbee and Mary Whidbee, infants by their guardian ad litem, and Sarah E. Whidbee and others were defendents, the undersigned Special Commissioners were appointed for that purpose, will offer at public sale at the village of Deep Creek in the County of Norfolk,

On SATURDAY, the 14th day of November, 1857, 12 o'clock, M.

That valuable and desirable Farm of which James N. Whidbee, died, seized and possessed situated in the said County and containing nine hundred acres more or less, consisting of the following tracts all joined and forming one Farm as follows:

One tract containing three hundred and fifty acres, more or less—one other tract containing one hundred and fifty acres more or less—and one other tract containing four hundred acres more or less. The location of this land is highly advantageous and important. Binding it on one side is the Dismal Swamp Canal and on the other navigable waters of the Eastern Branch of Elizabeth River, thus giving good water conveyance to the markets of Norfolk city and Portsmouth, and within eight or ten miles to each.—It is only two miles distant from the village of Deep Creek, whose society is as good and select as any in the State of Virginia, where there is a fine male and female School, and the surrounding neighborhood noted for its cultivated intellectual and social advantages. The proprietor of this beautiful and social Farm, Jas. N. Whidbee has expended large sums of money in improving and reducing it to order. He had built a large and commodious dwelling and all other houses proper and convenient for a large and valuable estate. He had laid of and fiished clothing on a large and well arranged system.—He had large grounds belted and ready to be fenced for cultivation. The soil and capabilities of this land for farming purposes are not surpassed if equaled by any in this section of Virginia. The location itself has always been deemed healthy and desirable. Considering the location of this land, the neighborhood, the improvements all now new, and the qualities of the soil an opportunity is now offered seldom to be met with by capitalists, as a safe and profitable investment. Tho' the deed under which we shall sell calls for only nine hundred acres, yet it is believed that an actual survey would much increase the number of acres.

TERMS.—One forth of the purchase money cash. The residue on a credit one, two and three years. The credit instalments to be each one third of said residue, bearing interest from the day of sale, with bonds and approved personal security, and title retained 'till the further order of the Court. Possession given 1st January, 1858.

Persons wishing to purchase are refered to, Dr. Jas. H. Williams, Jeremiah Whidbee, Esq., or to Mr. Henly, who will show them the land and premises.

NOTICE.

THE SUBSCRIBER WILL LEASE FOR one or a term of years, the new and spacious Hotel in E. City, known as the "Leigh House." It is amply furnished with every desirable convenience for a popular Hotel, and its location is unsurpassed. I will lease the above establishment upon accommodating terms, and desire myself that it shall be kept in the same style and order that has earned for it its present high reputation, under the efficient management of its present superintendent—Mr James Lee, a gentleman unsurpassed in all that is required to constitute a popular landlord.

There is a garden farm of some 50 acres, in a highly improved condition, furnishing vegetables sufficient for the use of the Hotel, and well supplied with corn, pigs, milch cows, &c. A good dwelling and all necessary out houses in good order are upon the farm. It is conveniently located for the use of the "Leigh House" being only about one mile from town.

Any one wishing to lease, will apply to the subscriber at Gatesville or to John Pool, Esq., E. City.

TWO VALUABLE FARMS FOR SALE.

THE UNDERSIGNED wishing to quit the business offers at private sale, his TWO FARMS known as the "Sutton and Morrice Farms," on "Turkey Ridge" in Perquimans County, N. C.

For beauty and rich land both of the said Farms equal if not surpass any in the Eastern part of North Carolina. The part of the two Farms under cultivation is very productive and desirable to the Farmer. An opportunity of purchasing land of such extra quality is seldom offered. The first tract contains about SEVEN HUNDRED ACRES, the second FIVE HUNDRED and over. Both of the said Farms may be converted into one if required. They have on them two good tenements and out buildings, and convenient to two Landings for shipping. It lies in a compact body, but may be easily divided into several tracts.

All persons wishing to examine the land, are respectfully invited to call and see for themselves. The undersigned will take pleasure in riding over and showing the land.

I will offer for sale upon liberal terms of credit, provided such security as required be given.

A RETIRED PHYSICIAN

Whose sands of life have nearly run out, discovered while in the East Indies, a certain cure for Consumption, Asthma, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and General Debility. The remedy was discovered by him when his only child, a daughter, was given up to die. He had heard much of the wonderful restorative and healing qualities of preparations made from the East India Hemp, and the thought occurred to him that he might make a remedy for his child He studied hard and succeeded in realizing his wishes. His child was cured, and is now alive and well. He has since administered the wonderful remedy to thousands of sufferers in all parts of the world, and he has never failed in making them completely healthy and happy. Wishing to do as much good as possible, he will send to such of his afflicted fellow-beings as request it, this receipt, with full and explicit directions for making it up, and successfully using it. He requires each applicant to inclose him one shilling—three cents to be returned as postage on the receipe, and the remainder to be applied to the payment of this advertisement.

Address Dr. H. JAMES
No. 19, Grand street, Jersey City, N. J

N. B.—Dr. H. James has neither office nor agent in New York, as some have pretended and advertised. The receipe is sent from NO PLACE but No. 19, Grand street, Jersey City, N. Jersey.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL.

W. P. GRIFFITH, having dissolved his connection with the firm of Vickery & Griffith, would respectfully inform the citizens of Elizabeth City and of the surrounding country, that he has opened at the store formerly occupied by the late Mr. B. C. Barclay,

The largest and best stock of Books and Stationery ever offered for sale in the City of Norfolk.

Believing that the wants and the tastes of the people required one establishment similar to those found in the large Northern cities, where a full and general assortment of Books can be obtained, the subscriber has been induced, during a recent visit to Philadelphia, New York and Boston, to purchase from the principal publishers, and at the great "Trade Sales," a superior stock of

School, Classical, Law, Medical, Theological, Religious and Miscellaneous

BOOKS.

Which will, upon examination, compare with any to be found in the Southern country.

My Stock of Foreign and American

STATIONERY,

Is very large and complete, it has been selected with great care, and embraces every article required for the School and Counting Room.

MY WHOLE STOCK IS ENTIRELY
—NEW.—

and has been bought upon the very best terms and a large portion for cash, which gives me a decided advantage over all other houses in the city, and will enable me to sell my goods at prices far below former rates.

Booksellers in this and adjacent Towns and Country Merchants, will find it greatly to their advantage to examine my stock before going North.

Colleges, Schools and Teachers, will be supplied at Northern prices.

By special arrangements with the following houses, I shall receive their new Books as they are issued from the Press, and will supply any or all of their publications at their prices:

J. B. Lippincott & Co.,	Philadelphia.

'YOUNG AMERICA' CORN AND COB MILL,
MANUFACTURED BY
S. MARCH, Norfolk, Va.

THE above Mill, which so far surpassed all others last season, has been improved, and made stronger and better than ever, and is now in the field carrying everything before it. It is the mill for strength, durability and swiftness.

I annex a list of premiums it has received this season, over the 'Little Giant,' 'Magic Mill,' Silver Mill, Maynard's Mill, and all others that have come into competition with it:

First premium at the N. York State Fair.
First premium at the Ohio State Fair.
First premium at the Michigan State Fair.
First premium at the N. Carolina State Fair.
First premium at the Nashville (Tenn.) Fair.
First premium at one County Fair in N. York.
First premium at ten County Fairs in Ohio.
Trial of corn and cob mills at the North Carolina State Fair, October 1856.

The following table will show the time occupied by each of the Mills on exhibition in grinding half bushel of corn and cobs:

Young America,	2 minutes and 40 seconds.
Little Giant,	4	"	55 "
Magic Mill,	6	"	"

Sinclair & Co's Mill, two trials, average time, 6 minutes and 58 seconds.

Advantages of the Young America or Excelsior Mill over all others: 1st, great strength and urability; 2d, simplicity, (having but one set screw to graduate the quality of grinding, which renders it so simple that it may be managed by any ordinary farm hand;) 3d, it will grind more corn, or corn and cob, in the same time, and of same quality, than any other mill in use of the same size; 4th, economy—that part of the mill which is most liable to wear, being separate from the main body of the machine, can be renewed when worn out, at the small cost of $3. Thus in the Young America or Excelsior mill, I present the best, cheapest and most durable mill ever offered to the Farmer. This mill is of large size and greater capacity than any other mill ever sold at the same price

Price, including extra plates, $50.

I am also manufacturing Cart and Wagon Wheels, Farm Wagons, Carts, Trucks, Drays, Plows, Harrows, Cultivators, Corn Shellers, and Agricultural Implements generally, and am better prepared to furnish farmers and merchants than any other house in the city.

Call and examine my stock and be convinced that it is to your interest to patronize Southern enterprize. I am unwilling to believe that all the men in Virginia and North Carolina prefer to build up the North and impoverish the South.

I have also a Foundry connected with my factory, and solicit orders for Castings generally.
